NATIONAL SURVEY · TRANSPARENCY IN AI

AI is writing health information. Should you be told?

Have your say

Health services are starting to use artificial intelligence (AI) to write and edit health information for patients, carers and families. We want to know what you think health services should tell you when AI has been used. This survey asks for your views.

10 minutes
Mostly multiple choice. A few optional text boxes.

Anonymous
We don't collect your name, email or anything that identifies you.

Australia-wide
Open to people in every state and territory.

Who can take part?

SURVEY 1 · CONSUMER
You use health services

SURVEY 2 · CARER
You care for someone who does

SURVEY 3 · STAFF
You work in a health service

Any adult (18+) living in Australia. You don't need to know anything about AI. If more than one survey fits you, you can complete more than one.

Scan to start

forms.cloud.microsoft/r/Q4gs76DLxx

The start page asks which survey fits you and takes you there. It records nothing.

Surveys close 24 December 2026

What happens with the results?

Your answers will shape practical AI transparency resources, co-designed with consumers, carers and health service staff. We'll share the findings with the Australian Commission on Safety and Quality in Health Care and publish them in health journals.

Read the Participant Information Statement before you start
It explains the study and includes contact details for questions.
drive.google.com/file/d/14CFbz93FGcMHRMNcY3t4pD9F3nnxLaN4/view?usp=sharing

Ethics approval: ACT Health Human Research Ethics Committee, 2026/ETH02132
Supported by the Canberra Hospitals Foundation Deborah Rolfe, AM, Perpetual Grant for Research.

Version 1.3 | 6 October 2026